The following pages and all that in contained represent a permanent record of your life in Clinton—a life rich in pleasures, rich in accomplishments, rich in profitable friendships, rich in inspiring teaching—rich, in short, in everything good and worthwhile. We trust that they will succeed in cementing your impressions of Clinton, in recalling to you the many joyful hours spent within her walls. If they achieve—even in small measure—this avowed goal, we shall be sure that our efforts have not been in vain.

Catching a little of the spirit of industrial advancement which typifies our age, we have modelled our book after Radio and, so far as possible, have planned and arranged everything to conform with that theme.

Months of planning and execution, effort and activity, have resulted in this, our final product and most significant achievement in Clinton, the Clintonian of the Class of June 1940. We set it before you now apprehensively, hoping that you will find it of sufficient worth to warrant examination and re-examination and that in future years it will help you to recapture memories of four youthful years happily spent.

GUIDING LIGHT

THESE are the times that try men's souls.

You young men are about to leave the cloistered life of the high school student to face a despoiling world. Let me urge you to do so with stout hearts and an unshakable faith that righteousness must in the end overcome evil; that sound morality must conquer bestial immorality.

Carry the torch of democracy high. Never let it be submerged and quenched in tepid cynicism. Be of good cheer. Face what you may be called upon to face with a smile and a clear eye. Keep on dreaming dreams, and one day your visions will become realities. Keep the faith. The world needs you, and I know that you will not fail the world.

To each of you, peace and happiness, strength to endure and courage to accomplish.

THE PEERLESS TRIO

MR. FRANK BOYLAN—Strict and energetic, he assumed Mr. Clark's responsible duties during the unfortunate illness of the Principal this semester and tried himself to be completely worthy of the praise and popularity he has excited despite the disciplinary nature of his regular duties as assistant to the Principal.

MR. WILLIAM P. ZINGARO—Versatile, skillful and full of helpful ideas, he has shown a remarkable understanding of the needs of the average pupil and has exerted all his authority as Administrative Assistant in an effort to aid the entire student body. As head of the Patrol Squad, he has won respect for the traditional Clinton code of conduct in the heart and mind of each and every Clintonite.

MRS. ANTOINETTE L. HERRMANN—Affable and energetic Dean of the Honor School, she directs the work of the students in the upper scholarship bracket. With the assistance of Miss Wilson, she supervises the programming of the Honor School boys, issues their admits, offers them guidance and counsel in selecting their colleges and professions, and carefully plans and coordinates the studies of the honor classes.

FACULTY ADVISERS

Business: Mr. William Lichtenstein

Art: Mr. Leon Winston

Literary: Dr. Morris T. Kwit

For five months the various staffs of the Clintonian have been planning and working feverishly in an attempt to present the Class of June 1940 with a yearbook of which it may rightfully be proud. On this page are represented some of the typical scenes which have occurred during the happy fulfillment of that goal. Glancing leisurely around the page, we see—Mr. Lichtenstein, Mr. Winston, and Dr. Kwit—the irrepressible triumvirate—overcoming the endless resistance of their hapless editor, “Lazy.” . . . “Lazy,” effecting a comeback and quick reversal of form, hurling a few meaningful pointers at his misguided Associates: Larry Sloan, Paul Gelman, William Nachbar, and Daniel Robins. . . . Abba Bayer, Marvin Fox, and Harold Klein, wielders of the mighty pin, posting a Clintonian notice on a board reserved—unbeknownst to most Seniors—for that express purpose. . . . Jerome Shapiro and Robert Stein, pen-pushers extraordinary, looking on contemptuously as Seymour Berger pecks out the story supreme. . . . Charles Levine, John Most, and Alvin Zakin, marvels of industry, resembling perpetual motion as closely as anything yet devised. . . . Red Gloger, our budding Rembrandt, taking his wayward subordinates in hand . . . and . . . Stanley Dubrin, Business Manager ingenious, deliberating a crucial pictorial problem, while the members of his unruly staff lend an occasional hand.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT

We, the Class of June 1940, defying anyone to question our mental abilities and physical prowess, seize this opportunity to unload some things of which we have tired on persons who will surely employ them to better advantage. May the recipients of our bequests enjoy using them as much as we did creating them.

TO DEAN COHEN We bequeath a crate of hammers and wrenches . . . to be used in breaking down future "machines."

TO MR. LICHTENSTEIN We leave a condescending Clintonian Editor who will ask no questions and agree meekly to a plastic binding.

TO THE FROSH: We leave the words of wisdom inscribed on the desks . . . and the gum under them.

TO MR. MAYFORTH We leave finished blueprints for a new and deluxe "Automat."

TO COACH RIBBERT AND THE BASKETBALL TEAM: We leave a dictionary with the words "sudden," "death," and "Madison" removed.

TO MR. PHILIPSON We leave a Managing Board that does not believe in elastic deadlines and bigger and better sab-Bali-cal leaves.

TO "DOC" GUERNSEY We leave twenty-five more years of Clinton Commerce tussles.

TO DEAN LOOHE We bequeath a Yab-lock and a blue bad dog to hang alongside his Harvard banner.

TO THE SEVENS We leave a Red and Black Taz with disappearing earmuffs. At least, they'll have something on their minds for once.

TO MISS RUDERMAN We leave a Cyrano de Bergerac to deliver amorous messages in our stead.

TO MR. CLARK We leave nine thousand untidy charges and our thanks for DE WITT CLINTON HIGH SCHOOL.

FACULTY

THOSE WE LOVE

IN ONE of the many new-fangled labor concentration camps which dot and lend beauty to the Uproarian countryside, preparations for a gala and uplifting sacrificial ritual were feverishly taking place. Everywhere, stones were being ground, axes sharpened, and appetites whetted.

Meanwhile, in the center of the party of traitors, calmly awaiting the hour of liquidation, sat Dean Aaron Cohen, most popular, pen in hand and book in lap.

"I'm not afraid to die," he chanted, in a voice loud and strong enough for all Uproaria to hear. "I'm worried only about this momentous volume which I've just finished and which may be destroyed after my death."

And he held aloft his manuscript, proudly displaying the title, "A Treatise on the Accepted Manner of Gaining Friends and Exercising an Influence over People."

"The devil with your book," chorused Mr. William Lichtenstein and Mr. M. J. Belasco, most industrious and hardest worker, respectively. "Let's do something to get out of here."

And the two captains of industry rose energetically and walked to the wall of the camp, where they fell to spiritedly and, with the aid of a fork and a pin, began to peck vigorously at the solid-steel structure.

"Idiots," murmured Mr. J. V. Gates, fewest tests. "Look how hard they work. Where did work ever get anyone? I've taken it easy always, never giving exams, and I'm still well liked."

"You're absolutely right," ejaculated Mr. Max Sherrin, easiest marker. "Life is so easy that whenever report cards are issued I merely hand an ink-pad to my squadman and have him stamp 100% on all of them."

"Why don't you two dry up?" intervened "Doc" Irwin S. Guernsey, wittiest, who sat in a corner with his head in his hands and wept bitterly.

"Please don't carry on so, Doc," whispered Dean Foote, most cooperative, who pined out his trusty handkerchief and helping "Doc" to wipe his moistened orbs. "We'll find a way out, somehow."

"Hey, I think I've got a plan," Miss Hannah Ruderman, prettiest, suddenly screamed. "Just wait," she called, stopping to powder her face and reset her hair. "And watch my perfumed smoke. I'll have us out of here in no time."

And so saying, she set out determinedly in the general direction of the camp commander's headquarters.

"Poor girl, we'll probably never see her again," declared Mr. Abraham Feibusch, best natured, sighing sympathetically.

"Gee, but you're chicken-hearted," unisoned the Messrs. McIndoe and Bono, hardest marker and most tests, respectively. "Just see how hard and how cold we can be."

"We do see," commented Dr. Henry Davidson, most beloved. "And where does your efficiency get you? Why . . ."

"Now, now, gentlemen—no quarrels," insisted Mr. Israel Schuldentrei, handsomest. "No need to fight and mar our features any sooner than necessary. Say, Roland, I wonder if you would do me a favor. I'd like to have my picture taken before I die—you know, a remembrance for my dear old mother. Would you mind fixing my tie, combing my hair, setting the camera, and snapping the picture?"

"Why, no, not at all," stammered Mr. J. Roland Gallo, most versatile. "Glad to satisfy the closing wish of a dying man."

"Say, put us in too," called Mr. Arthur Wessel and Mrs. Grace Schapiro, best dressed man and woman. "We're something for display."

"All right, get in," Mr. Gallo acquiesced. "I don't care."

Quickly the three eye-catchers lined up. Slowly Mr. Gallo got everything ready, adjusted the camera and prepared to click the shutter.

"Hey, hey," a familiar, high-pitched voice suddenly shouted.

"Why, it's Miss Ruderman," fifteen voices cried all at once. "What's happened?"

"We're all free! I got us all free!"

"How? Why? When?" fifteen voices shouted.

"Why, it's simple. . .

The General took one look at me,

And now, my friends, we all are free!"

THE TOWN CRIER

Graduates of this realistic day set out in life to the ringing sound of the tocsin materialism. We are everywhere told that this is a world in which everything is measured in terms of the possible—a world in which sentimentality and emotion have no place.

DWC

And the inevitable result has been to convert our youth into automata who care for nothing but money and the misleading power which it brings.

We do not altogether condemn this tendency. Possession of material is beneficial and desirable. But it is desirable not—as too many of us have made it—as an ultimate objective, a happy and crowning end. Rather, it serves its purpose as a begetter of more elusive pleasures, of more lofty achievements.

We forget too quickly—or perhaps we never fully realize—that there are things in life more important and more gratifying than the material articles of which money and world power are representative. In our mad rush for tangible wealth, we put aside too soon the more subtle values, the more satisfying riches. We overlook the fragrance of the rose, the beauty of the summer sunset. We see not the artist drawing life from his palette, nor the quickness and precision with which an architectural masterpiece takes form.

Unfortunately, we shall soon learn that the happy man is not always the one who has the most meat on his table, the most bread in his pantry, the most wine in his cellar.

Indeed, the world has known men who—though possessing all the riches and power for which human beings have struggled for centuries—have never hit upon the real essence of life, the true spirit of joyous living. And the world has known men who—despite their poverty and want—have reached a happy and fruitful level from which hardship and suffering could never hope to shake them.

It is after the second of these that we, all mankind, had best model ourselves.

We do not mean to imply that we ought blindly to discard our material ambitions and to search for a sort of idyllic paradise where want and suffering are non-existent. Nothing is further from our thoughts. What we are trying to implant is a cultural understanding of the world about us, a rediscovery of the beauty of nature and of man-made art, a submerging in short, of our material aspirations and a reawakening of our finer and more aesthetic feelings.

ACTIVITIES

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

DEMOCRACY IN ACTION

ANNOUNCER: Good evening. Today the Clintonian is happy to present another session of "Democracy in Action." This evening's topic will be "Your G.O." Your moderator will be Mr. J. Rolland Gallo, Honorary President of the G.O. Mr. Gallo. . . .

MR. GALLO: Thank you. During this evening's program, written especially for Seniors, we shall try to give you a summary of this term's General Organization activities. Our first speaker, Mr. Julian Luft, G.O. Vice-President, will bring forth some of this term's outstanding features. Mr. Luft. . . .

LUFT: We can truly say that this term has been one of the most active in Clinton G.O. history. To start it off with a bang, the new G.O. booklets were distributed to each section on the first day of the term. And among its many other new advantages, the booklet offered each G.O. member the opportunity to witness the motion picture, "Play Ball America," which was shown in the auditorium on February 17th. The G.O. also sponsored a special Peace Day assembly on April 25th, in which students participated as speakers.

In a large measure, the success of this term's G.O. is due to the untiring and unceasing efforts of your G.O. president, Mr. David Fanshel. Many thanks, Dave!

MR. GALLO: Thank you, Mr. Luft. The next speaker will be Mr. Ernest Chanes, Secretary of the G.O., who will tell us something about the Executive Council. Mr. Chanes. . . .

CHANES: Well, the Executive Council has really done some great work this term. Composed of the three G.O. officers, the form representatives, the two student members of the Board of Governors and the Honorary President of the G.O., the Council is truly representative of DeWitt Clinton. This term, in particular, has been an unusual one. First of all, the Council has abolished the old "convention" form of electing representatives from the various forms. Instead, everyone in every form now votes for his officer. Steps have been taken to knit the clubs and squads even more closely together. And, finally, the Council has okaved numerous appropriations and club charters for further action by the Board of Governors.

MR. GALLO: And our last speaker will be the student Secretary of the Board of Governors, Mr. Charles Levine. Mr. Levine. . . .

LEVINE: Unfortunately, I must report here a note of sadness—one that has deeply affected this term's Board of Governors. I refer, of course, to the unexpected illness of our Chairman, Mr. A. Mortimer Clark. However, we are happy to state that Mr. Clark has fully recuperated and is once more at the helm.

In Mr. Clark's absence during the latter portion of the term, Mr. Frank DeLeon, acting principal, took his place. The other four members of the Board of Governors are Dr. Morris Kwit, Mr. J. Ronald Gallo, and the two student members—Ben Diet and myself.

Besides passing appropriations for various school activities, the board has seen fit to grant charters to several new clubs and has discussed various measures and ideas for the betterment of the school.

MR. GALLO: Thank you. That concludes today's "Democracy in Action" broadcast. May I extend the thanks of the entire student body, and my own, to all those who have helped to make this term's General Organization what it has been.

ANNOUNCER: Thank you, Mr. Gallo. Today's topic has been "Your G.O." Our next program, to be broadcast in the very near future, will be "The Clinton Senior and Graduation." Don't forget to tune in.

G.O. EXECUTIVE

THE MARCH OF TIME

Time: 7:00 P.M.

Place: Any interesting point in the vicinity of New York City.

Commentator Good evening Ladies and Gentlemen and welcome to another presentation of radio's most popular feature. Each week at this time the wandering mike of Station WOOE takes you to some new and important scene of American life and interviews people on the spot on some pertinent question. Later in the program, I shall relate how you the radio audience may win a big Cash Prize absolutely free. But, now, it is my pleasure to turn the air over to the two gentlemen who will conduct the evening's activities in their own inimitable fashion. Take it away John Parkson and Holly Butterfingers!

Holly Okay, Milton, we've got it. Greetings and salutations, Ladies and Gentlemen, and welcome again to another half-hour of your favorite and my favorite program. I wonder if any of you John Kerrans have guessed, from the hum of conversation and the enthusiastic cheering and singing that rise above my voice, where fate has landed us this evening. If you haven't, we'll relieve the suspense. Our travelling apparatus is situated in the magnificent, gaily decorated lobby of New York's Astor Hotel where the Senior prom of De Witt Clinton High School is being held. About the lushly carpeted halls are strolling many young men resplendently outfitted in tuxedo jackets and starched shirts and escorting their beautiful be-gowned "dates."

But, now, I hear an orchestra striking up somewhere inside, and I know that the hour of dinner is fast approaching. So let us proceed with our program and the question of the evening, which promises many interesting results. Since this dance is one of the last great functions which the Seniors will attend prior to graduation, they must have decided just what they have got out of school, and which part of their school life will remain most strongly in their memories. Therefore we ask: "Which of your four years has made the greatest impression upon you, and why?" We have a fairly large crowd of spectators, so suppose 'n we shove off. Who's the first victim, Johnny?

Park: Coming right up. May I present Mr. Gleep, graduate come-June of Clinton, and captain of the school's bridge team.

Holly: Delighted! Step right up here, under this artificial palm, and give us your story. A little closer to the microphone, now. That's right. Go ahead, now.

Gleep: Well, Mr. Butterfingers, you may consider me very sentimental to take the first year as the best, but I have my reasons. You see, before I entered Clinton that day in September 1936, I was only a kid, both in body and in spirit. I had never been on my own, never felt myself responsible for my own actions, because I was young and responsibilities had never been thrust on me. My parents and my teachers in Public School had nurtured that feeling, and everything that I did there was carefully supervised. But, now, I was being thrown all on my own into a world of nine thousand boys. I didn't walk the few blocks to school any more. I rode on a crowded subway. I didn't follow my class through the halls like a little sheep to the clapping hands of a teacher. I trod my own path through the maze of alien halls unguided. That year I can definitely mark as the turning point in my life—a change from a boy whose main object in life was growing and to whom the routine of school came only incidentally, to a young man for the first time aware of his own individuality.

I cannot say that I passed through the cocoon stage without growing pains, for every freshman knows the horror of being a freshman. I was a typical bewildered firstie, gaping at the Seniors, forgetting Legion hats, losing my way to the program room, putting my foot in it every time an instructor cracked the verbal whip. Most of it was agonizing—a constant parade of losses and betrayal—the first midterm when I was absolutely sure of flunking and scared half out of my wits at sight of the neatly printed lethal document . . . the first lateness, when I was handed a yellow slip and a stiff lecture by Mr. Jurlerat . . . the many pens I lost, and the exams I missed because of them . . . the scene in the pool, when I had forgotten a towel ticket and was the butt of well deserved scorn from Mr. Chambers.

Sometimes, it seemed that the whole world, including all the Seniors and tutors, was converging on me to wreak its destruction. Yet there were happy sides to the picture, which frequently overshadowed the others and made those days seem like pages from paradise. I remember most clearly my first Chow Mein and the thrilling games of table hockey in the lunchroom . . . the lovely spring days, when our gym class left the world of "spots" and basketball hoops and went into the open fields outside to play soccer and soft ball . . . the joy of the good report card and the feeling of pride when my first scholarship card was received. Most of all, I remember that first football season, the best one in my four year stay in Clinton. I can still see "Doc" Guernsey on the platform during the football pep assemblies, with the football team and the cheerleading squad in back of him, punching enthusiasm into us with cheers and rousing songs. Maybe we were peppier in those days, too, for how we cheered Shorty Consagra as he tore mightily through the Commerce line to chalk up our greatest triumph—110! Yessir, even though I like my Senior hat and all that, I'd trade it all to return to those good ol' days.

Holly: I don't blame you, Mr. Gleep. Your story has stirred these hardened veterans deeply. I'm sure I saw a tear or two in their eyes as you recalled the days of their infancy. All right, let my tire away.

Park: Fresh off the griddle, let me introduce Hornby Smythe, voted the most consistent contributor to school publications.

Holly: Always glad to meet a man of letters, Mr. Smythe. Tell me, have you ever had anything published?

LIBRARY SQUAD

Smythe: Well, no, I specialize in stuff for the revolution, and these capitalist-controlled—!!

Holly: —Uh, Uh. That will have to pass the censor first. However, suppose you engage the question of the evening in the mean while. Give us your opinion, from the radical point of view, of the best year spent in high school.

Smythe: Well, I shall try. Stop me if I get too bourgeois. Sometime my Sophomore year always sticks in my memory, probably because that was my worst year. I came to the main building in September of '37, after the 77th Street annex had closed down, and instantly I began to lose all the fine visions and plans I had formulated during the first year. Higher marks, squads and service—they all flew out of the window, and I sat back, caring for nothing but the present. I guess that was a normal reaction after the hectic frosh year, but with me it was chronic. Let Emanuel, Osman and the rest of those fellows get the high marks; I would at least keep myself in good health by not working too hard. . . .

While I was in this intellectual coma, I found time to watch the school roll by. Somehow, during that fall season, the 30¢ blue pasteboard known as the G.O. card did not bring the same kind of pleasure it had previously . . . the stirring G.O. elections, the exciting football and basketball seasons, the mammoth Club Carnival in Gym 2 with more than thirty Clubs represented, the "girls gazette" of the Clinton News and the promised Stadium. But it did bring other pleasures. The main event was the Clinton Anniversary, the celebration of forty years of Clinton life, with special editions of the Magpie and the Clinton News, and also a jubilee on December fourth with athletic contests, plays, speeches by the leading school personalities, and, of course, dancing.

Life rolled on for me slowly and lazily through the winter months, and on into the spring. Peace Assemblies again, the Russian Hats of the Seniors, the News Pretty Girl Contest, plays in the Clinton auditorium, and the rumors about the reorganization of the 18th Street annex into a science school. All of this gave no hint of the monster that lay just beyond the horizon, and I was caught completely unaware when the French teacher one day brought up the subject of Regents. Regents? What were they? The subject was fully explained, with emphasis on the gruesome details involved in thinking. I was thoroughly frightened by an examination in a subject with which I had not even a speaking acquaintance, and I crammed, spent hours in the Arista Help Classes, and slept each night with the French Book under my pillow. But all too late to avoid disaster. Nervous as I was on the exam day, I spent nearly the entire three hours on the conjugation of "avoir," and sweated like a sponge when I came out.

SQUAD

MATHEMATICS OFFICE SQUAD

Did you succeed?

I decided—of my own accord, of course—to continue with French.

Without a doubt, a very judicious decision. Thank you, anyway, for that interesting personal discussion. Johnny, will you bring the ne—Egad, John, is that a rainbow or a sunbeam floating in my direction? Or are you leading the spectrum by the hand? From what my dazzled orbs can see of him, he is outfitted in orange shoes, green rolled-up trousers displaying a plaid sock which would incite a Scotsman to revolution, a purple shirt, and a sport coat which defies any description whatsoever. Who is this marvel, Johnny?

Let me introduce the heppiest hep cat and alligator Clinton has to offer. It's Mr. O. Johnny Shag, the hottest lad this side of Miller.

Yeah, man. I'm in the groove tonight. Call me a taxi—okay, I'm a taxi.

You certainly are. You'd pass for a Checker Cab anytime. Suppose that you play with our question, while you're still warm.

If you're shootin' the query to me, dearie, I'm ready, willing and able. I just want to ask you one thing, though. What were the three outstanding events of 1938 to 1939, in your estimation?

Why, I should say Munich and the subsequent invasion of Czechoslovakia, the great floods in America, and the opening of the New York World's Fair.

Shag: Well, they may be three of the biggest to you, but they're not to me. 6:30 in the morning. . . . Even though we did get out at 12:30, we were deader than a smoked herring. . . . Perhaps you wonder what I am talking about, or maybe you can guess. Out of a clear sky, we had a triple session thrown at us. Of course, we knew that the school was getting crowded—the annexes closing down—but nevertheless, a triple session seemed like a major catastrophe to us coming back in September. The boys above the fifth term, among whom we were inconspicuously included, went to school from 8:00 to 12:45, a bit different from the 8:50-to-2:40 arrangement which we had had before. The Honor School was temporarily in session from 9 to 2:30, but in January all hours were made the same. We never really sacrificed so much for school, as when we had to crawl out of bed on those bitter winter mornings an hour earlier than ever before.

The change in the G.O. card came as no surprise though, because there had been considerable talk beforehand about reducing the size of the G.O. deficit. The new G.O. card was priced at forty cents, and it wasn't really a card, but a twelve page booklet. Everybody wore a big red button from nt on also, signifying that he too was holding his finger in the dike.

Holly: Nice going, there, Mr. Shag. I guess we'll have time for about one more, Johnny. Have you one ready?

Park: I certainly have, Holly. I should like to present the honorable I. O. Yugh, one of the class's outstanding politicians.

Holly: Delighted, Mr. Yugh. You have already had plenty of experience in public speaking, I know, so you will need no prompting.

Yugh: My frans! I disagree heartily and wholly with you. How can you stand there and place any other year before your Senior year? It's disgraceful and what is more, it is treason against the Senior Council.

We shall certainly remember our Senior year not only with regard to our own activities, but to those of the rest of the world as well. For didn't we begin school in September of 1939, less than a fortnight after WAR had been declared in Europe? And didn't we witness, while the year marched off and a new one came in, how Germany attacked Norway and the low countries? Indeed, this section of our school life will remain in our memories as one of screaming headlines, tense radio reports, and of a fear and hope within ourselves as to the way our OVN government would turn.

Almost everything that happened within the Senior year was controlled actively by our own class. Seniors were featured in the G.O. elections; Seniors ran the Arista; Seniors edited the Magpie, the Clinton News, and, of course, the Clintonian; Seniors formed our athletic teams and the Service League; Seniors managed the office squads. This was the year in which we finally attained the key positions in the organizations for which we had worked some three years previously. This year we reaped our individual rewards.

Aside from all the extra-curricular work, we shall always remember, and be influenced by, hundreds of little cards, blanks, and numerals with which we have come into contact. The year has been a procession of character cards, report cards, permanent record cards, Senior averages, knock cards, college bulletins and requirements, Arista blanks, Class Nice tickets, Regents cards, scholarship applications, working papers, lunchroom scrip, service record, and college applications. Who can I EVER forget 'em?

Holly: I don't think anybody can, at least not the Clinton Senior. I hope all of you boys have as clear a memory of your school as time goes on as you have tonight. I don't think you'll find anybody to disagree that you have had a wonderful experience. Okay Milton, take it away.

Comm: I've taken it, Holly. And since we haven't much time left, I'll just say Good Night to you all, and tell you to listen in next week, same time, same station, to radio's most amazing show.

CLUB MATINEE

DO YOU think I should've used a 'Q' instead of a 'C' " —and, furthermore, Japan has deliberately and—"
Guard your queen, guard your queen!

We're still within the portals of our dear old Alma Mater, D.W.C., and not in the observation ward of Bellevue, as some of you may have fancied

We have simply enumerated some of the dialogues frequently heard during after-school sessions of a few of Clinton's many extra-curricular clubs and activities

In whatever field of endeavor the interests of the individual Clintonite may lie, there is a club or squad in this school composed of students with similar interests, and through free intercourse with these other students he soon becomes proficient in his chosen activity.

In this manner, the school changes from an aloof and indifferent place of learning in which the student is confined each day, to a living, breathing part of the student and a place in which he may express himself and reap the harvest of a fuller and more enjoyable life

To the fulfillment of this goal, the clubs and squads of this school are dedicated. We sincerely hope that the graduate, looking back upon his four years of high-school life, will feel that he received a little bit more from the school than the prescribed curriculum.

With cannons booming, bombs bursting, and shells whistling 'over there,' Clinton social science clubs pursued a more peaceful course in settling differences of varying kinds. Such clubs as the Current History Club, the History Honor Society, the Newman Club, the Jewish Discussions Club, the American Students Union, the Town Hall Club, the American Club, and the Law Society, gave budding orators and statesmen an opportunity to prove their prowess.

STAGECRAFT SQUAD

Star gazers, microscope addicts, and microbe hunters among us had a wide field from which to choose, with such scientific clubs as the Astronomy Club, the Chemical Society, Microscopical Society, Nature Study Club, and Physiography and Science Clubs, functioning beautifully. Aspiring doctors flocked to the Medical Society and the Medical Office Squad, while those who like to play with juicy logarithms and irrational digits found the Math Club and Math Team welcome heavens in which to test their geometric genius.

Europe, torn with war and strife, offered no obstacle to our linguists, who, in thorough safety, basked in the sun of the Italian and French Riviera, beheld the Spanish lover strumming his guitar for his Spanish señorita, and watched breathlessly the antics of a South American gaucho, all through the medium of the foreign language clubs. Potential thespians, having a more provincial attitude, were content with merely taking trips to the theater under the supervision of the Playgoers Club.

If you were a jitterbug, and "in the groove" and "rug-cutter" were synonymous with Benny Goodman or Webb Miller, you had the Class Nite orchestra and the band. If Beethoven's third symphony in E flat held you spellbound, there was the orchestra or chorus to fill the bill. The Cheerleaders were always willing to oblige with other vocal recitations.

Potential guests on "Hobby Lobby" turned out in large numbers to the Stamp and Aquarium Clubs. Houdanis joined the Magic Circle, Wiley Posts, the Aero Club, and Rembrandts, the Graphic Arts Club. If basketball and football were too rough, the Ping Pong Club could always supply the needed exercise.

And so it went. Whatever the bent of a student's mind, whatever his talents and inclinations, he was sure to find some group in Clinton ready to develop his abilities and fire his inborn interests.

DOCTOR I. Q.

Waving aloft its traditional standard—Service, Character, and Scholarship—this term's Arista continued determinedly along Service Road, keeping its destination—a better Clinton—in mind at every turn.

The honor society's activities were, as always, characterized by a sincere and respectful desire to aid the entire school by concentrating upon the weaknesses of the individual student. The Freshman Advisory Council, under the skillful guidance of Lew Krulwich and Burton Muller, continued to carry high the banner of efficiency and willing service. The committee offered counsel to the lower termers along the lines of scholarship, service, and extra-curricular opportunities.

The Help Class Committee, Arista's other student aid standby, enjoyed a typically successful and beneficial term. Under the able direction of Rupert Burstein, who finally equalled—despite the triple session—the degree of excellence achieved by Lazar Emanuel during the previous semester, the classes once again aided immeasurably in raising hundreds of sinking students in the languages, mathematics, and sciences.

Never ceasing its helpful labors, the society embarked early in the term upon a new and much-needed activity. Placed under the special supervision of Arista's affable Assistant Dean, Mr. Henry Berkman, the Scholarship Investigation Committee quickly took its place among the group's most widely appreciated functions. It was composed of carefully selected members who were supposed to impress upon the student body the desirability of maintaining high scholarship grades.

To offset the tediousness of its other work, the elite appointed Paul Gelman and Harold Gershen to head the Entertainment Committee. The semi-annual prom with its Walton counterpart was held in May. And as a final touch, there was the traditional June boatride to Indian Point.

The three men who were most responsible for the expansive nature of the society's work were Joseph Chall, Leader, Howard Fentuch, Vice Leader, and George Sternberg, Secretary. Dean "Doc" Irwin S. Guernsey continued to shape the destiny of the group and, in so doing, of the entire school.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES

MOTION pictures have immortalized the newspaper reporter who sits with his feet on his desk, shouting at the Managing Editor, and who smashes rackets and traps spy rings on alternate days. Although the disbelieving public may consider this species of journalist safely tucked away in celluloid, the Clinton News is a fertile ground for the development of the type.

About two weeks are allotted for preparations for each News issue. The first three days are quite normal. Then the Managing Board is transformed into a bundle of activity and worry. No one dares approach the News Editor, Bob Stein, who goes about mumbling to himself, bewailing the absence of news. The Features Editor, Joe Hersler, loads his guns and starts a search for his columnists: Literary, Lazar Emanuel; Gossip, Larry Sloan; Faculty, Charles Levine; and Alumnites, Dan Silverman. Somehow, the Editor in Chief, Mark Wohlwerth, retains enough balance to keep the journalistic machine functioning.

The first week departs, but not without leaving its mark. Monday points a tormenting finger at the Headlines Editor, Gene Kerr, who is swamped with nouns, verbs, and unit counts. Tuesday and Wednesday follow, the less said about these the better. Wednesday finds the Managing Editor, Dave Rosenblum, and the Board, at the Printer's. Hours of hard labor climax two weeks of work on the issue. Friday, the paper appears, neat and well done, bearing little evidence of the mixture of insanity, struggle, and worry that have produced it.

Once each term, a large majority of Clintonites dig into their pockets and exchange twenty-five cents for the latest issue of the Maggie. Opening his copy, the reader finds an impressive array of art and literature.

Unlike the News, the completion of one issue of the Maggie requires an entire term's work. The literary board—headed this term by Co-Editors-in-Chief William Nachbar, Abba Bayer, and Arnold Israel—spends weeks reading material, weeding out worthless contributions, and searching for sparks of talent.

Besides working on cartoons and photographs, the Art Staff—under John Baldwin—must study accepted literary material in order to create appropriate illustrations.

Three and a half years of school! The Senior smiles reflectively and looks forward to the joys of his last term—Senior Hat, Class Nite, Prom, the Clintonian—the Clintonian to the Senior means pictures of himself and his classmates, a review of life at Clinton, teacher personalities, and a permanent and beautiful reminder of high school days.

To accomplish all this, concentration, skill, and care are required. The Clintonian Staff—comprised largely of Seniors and headed this semester by Editor-in-Chief Lazar Emanuel and Associate Editors Larry Sloan, Daniel Robins, Paul Gelman, and William Nachbar—goes about its tasks with precision and energy. Each staff member is assigned some phase of the school's activities, into which he must breathe life in the form of words. Clubs, sports, Senior activities, and all other aspects of school life are considered, as this issue will testify. The Clintonian is published with the aim of preserving something of Clinton life, which the graduate may take with him into the world.

SENIORS

FIRESIDE CHAT

Every now and then, we are presented with an opportunity to regard ourselves critically and to conduct a patient review, to examine what we have already done and to determine, as a consequence, our future policies. Such an opportunity is now made available to us, the Class of June 1940, both collectively and individually.

For four years, we have been making our several marks in Clinton. Now the hour has come to inspect what we have done, to test the things we have accomplished.

For some of us, such an examination will be a welcome and happy experience. We shall find our ledger filled with records of scholastic success and achievement. For these few, it will serve as a virtual pat on the back, a sentimental reward for a task well done.

For others of us, our inventory will resolve itself into a forceful reminder that we have been lying down on the job—merely drifting along when we might have been doing great things. In such of us, it will arouse feelings of justified remorse and, we trust, of increased ambition.

For a good many of us, our test will prove itself a sad awakening, a bitter realization that we have made little use of the four years we have spent here, that at times when we might have been employing ourselves to better advantage, we were occupied with matters of little consequence. For such of us, it should be a potent warning, a strong incentive for increased effort. Whether it will or not, the individual alone is capable of deciding.

And whatever the result of our inventory, let us remember that there will be many another like it in the years to come, many another chance to settle our accounts with ourselves, the final judges. And let us endeavor to make each succeeding settlement more joyous and more satisfying; let us attempt to fill our lives with rich and profitable accomplishments.

Good luck!

Peter Moraites

Don't tell me I'm getting out!

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

THE class of June 1940—army-like in its precision—embarked upon its last year in Clinton determined to ring up a long list of impressive victories and successes.

Receiving its preliminary training at camp 7 under Chief of Staff Max Nadel, the self-styled horde broke camp one crisp February day and set out to conquer the world. General Julian Luft rode calmly at the head of the forces, astride his beautiful red charger. Behind him, at the head of the band and uttering endless words of encouragement, were Colonel Ray Kupchinsky and Captain Ralph Faliks—warriors extraordinary.

The first stop in the line of activities was the appointment of committees to supervise the various military activities. When the army reached the walls of the city called Enjoyment, a dance class was organized to teach all "wallflower" soldiers how to "truck on down" in style. After a siege of four months, Enjoyment finally fell, and the victorious army marched arrogantly through the crumbled gates of the city. The evening of the triumph, two hundred warriors who had managed to retain their spirits during the combat attended a celebration which was held in the City Hall.

After several weeks spent in drilling for examinations prepared by the Army Regents, the soldiers turned once again to more bellicose activities. They awoke one morning to find a notice announcing the arrival of a new Chief of Staff, Dean Aaron Cohen, posted in the mess hall. The same afternoon, reports were received to the effect that General Luft had been replaced by General Pete Morantes and that Stanley Dubrin had been made a Captain along with Taliks. Colonel Ray Kura-hinsky having successfully resisted the purge.

The new officers came prepared to lead the Clinton army on a later and more intense campaign than ever before. Since the maneuvers were to be more extensive ones, a larger corps was appointed with the following in charge of operations: prom, Dan Silverman and Ben Zimmerman; Clintonian, Lazar Emanuel; Class Nite, Larry Sloan; hat, Bob Stein and Al Gnesin; publication, David Rosenblum; athletics, Joe Samuelson; publicity, Mark Wohlwerth and Larry Sloan; memorial, Harold Gershen and Bob Ullman; college, Gene Kerr; photography, Bob Friedberg; finance, Ira Marcus; Howie Feinlich; and Normie Civic; alumni, Sy Berger; and constitution, Arnold Markowitz.

Each of the Unit chiefs set out enthusiastically on his individual operations, determined to increase the efficiency and well being of the entire force. The Publicity Department saw to it that each warrior was informed of General Staff policies and of prospective campaigns. The Memorial Department worked on a monument to commemorate the eventual passing of the soldiers.

The College Committee made sure that the troops were kept informed about the increased training in effective tactics and measures made available by more advanced institutions. The Photo Board recorded troop engagements and events pictorially. The Finance Division collected the funds necessary for the maintenance of the campaign and supervised the accounts at General Headquarters. The Alumni Board arranged for future reunions of the veterans of the campaign. And the Constitution Branch sought to increase the efficiency of operation by enacting a series of workable codes.

To outfit the entire army, a Policeman's Hat was selected as the battalion's official headgear. The regiment newspaper, "Senior Chatter," was successfully published, while the athletic squads enjoyed successful seasons against those of other troops.

On a beautiful evening toward the end of May, the soldiers, accompanied by their fair partners, gathered at Fort Astor and, forgetting the cares of drill and combat, proved their mastery over the terpsichorean art.

The successful campaign had its colorful ending June 7 and 8, when the soldiers and their best girls attended a hilarious opus in the regiment hall, scene of innumerable affairs of a similar nature in other years.

A fortnight later, they were given an opportunity to review the course and success of the campaign encounters and operations in the pages of the Clintonian, the official Army record.

Finally, after four years of loyal camaraderie, the army marched regrettably into the convention hall at General Headquarters one day in June, where General Moraites disbanded his followers with a sigh of regret. The entire force departed sorrowfully, determined to explore the four corners of the earth in search of success and security.

YOUR HIT PARADE

HERE we are, folks, at the Garden, where, for some strange reason, a bloody free-for-all is now in progress. The boys are sure going to town tonight. — He's down! — No! — They're all rushing over to pick him up. What's that? Oh, I see what you mean. The fellow down front says it's Peter Moraites, class prexy, and it looks like he's "Most Popular."

The light goes on — There goes Dave Rosenblum plowing through the whole arena. The boy "Most Likely To Succeed" seems to be getting there pretty fast. Getting where? Ohhhh—just THERE.

It's a pretty rough battle, and they're throwing in the rescue squad. Lazar Emanuel's out there getting the boys back on their feet again. No one is doing more, out there, than "Lazy" who "Did The Most For Clinton."

There's a quaint tussle, folks — The boy is knocking them down and then picking them up again. It's Ray Kupchinsky, and he sure seems "Most Cooperative." Right alongside of him I can see Dan Silverman slugging away with all he's got. He's hitting them with both fists, both feet, and both eyes. He's the "Hardest Worker" on this gory scene.

Off to the left, I can just make out Sy Berger, "Most Efficient" boy in the place. He sets them all up in a line (a nice neat line), hits the first one hard, and they all go down.

If you people will wait a while we may be able to get one of those gladiators up here to say a few words. My assistant just hooked Howie Feintuch, and here he is —

"Hello, Ma; Hello, Pa—Aw, Shucks!"

Howie is a "Most Unassuming" young man, and, for contrast, we might glance now to the far corner where Norman Civic has just made a speech. He's getting off the soap box and shaking hands with all the boys. From the way he acts, you'd think he were "Class Politician."

Well, well, well! There's a fellow with his back towards us, but all the boys around him have stopped the battle-royal and are saluting him. I guess he's Joseph Chall, the "Most Honored."

I wonder where the "Most Versatile" boy, Stan Dubrin, is? I guess — Yep! He's right under us. Stan is wrestling a tall fellow, boxing a short stocky individual, and while playing tiddle-dee-winks, flirting with three blondes—the three that I invited to this "slundig"—that so and so!!!

Haw! Haw! Haw! (No, it's not the class donkey.) There's an ambitious fellow for you. He's not only trying to appropriate (sometimes ex-

DWC

appropriate) that one square foot of board for himself—but he wants to take a few dozen friends with him. (By the way, if you don't know, he represents Ira Marcus, the "Most Ambitious.")

The battle rages on—Mark Wohlwerth whips out his mighty, death-dealing mechanism—It's a typewriter, and the "Best Writer" slams into it. My mistake—(Alas, poor Mark, did you know him well?) Larry Sloan, "Class Playwright," just evicted him and Larry's doing the slamming now.

Hey! Joe Samelson, get away from my girl friends! (He may be the "Handsome" fellow in the class, but he's not going to show his angelic physiognomy to my girl.)

I thought this was supposed to be a slug-fest. Francis Thomas, George Sternberg, and Ralph Taliks don't seem to agree on that point (the non-conformists). The "Class Jitterbug," "King of Swing," and "Class Bandleader" are so deep in the groove that, "ickie" that I am, I can barely see their shoulder blades.

(I don't know how we're going to bring our "Class Artist," John Baldwin, into this mess, unless we say that he's painting a picture of the event. I'll just say that John is in this and let it go at that.)

I might state that Bob Friedberg, "Class Photographer," is scooping the world and recording the event for posterity.

At least, there are two fellows who think it's all quite laughable—Selwyn Savage and Gene Kerr, the "Class Wits."

We can just make out Bob Stein in a cloud of dust, dusting off the gladiators with a Fuller whisk broom. (Don't you get it?—He's "Best Natured.")

Some one down there seems to think a free-for-all is still going on. Nope! you didn't guess it.—It's Howie Frankel, the "Most Persevering."

Hey! Ben! get away from here. (This is the last time I'll take all my girl friends to anything.) Don't get too sincere with Ann! (Ben Zimmerman may be "Most Sincere"—but who wouldn't be sincere where Ann is concerned.)

The end seems near, and over by the refreshments stand sits Pasquale (Pat to you) Giglio, our "Biggest Eater."

Say there, little boy, will you please sit down and stop that yelling? What do I mean by "little boy," you say? Aren't you Al Gnesin, "Class Baby?" Well, that's settled.

So-long, folks.

FIRST NIGHTER

SHAKESPEARE? The name's familiar. Oh, yeah, that's right. He's the fellah who wrote Class Nite."

Well, something to that general effect could be heard around the school immediately after the two presentations of the Senior show on June 7 and 8. For on those two evenings, a witty satire on the noted Bard of Avon was presented to the Seniors.

The play, entitled "All the World's A Stooze," and containing extracts from such famous Shakespearean masterpieces as "Macbeth," "Romeo and Juliet," and "The Taming of the Fool," was penned by Sherwin Cloth and Mor Wechsler, two former Clintonites.

Eddie Joseph, the star of several previous Class Nite performances, was again the leading comic, being ably supported by Mark Cattelton, Mark Wohlforth, Donald Gidus, David Wexler, Howard Rothman, James Courtin, Hal Gerstel and Reuben Fisher. An excellent job of impersonation was turned in by Larry Storch, and Al Fairweather gave a startling demonstration to confirm the old theory that "the hand is quicker than the eye."

The Class Nite Committee, which handled much of the technical work of the production, was headed by Larry Sloan and Mark Cittel-son.

During the intermission, the Class Celebrities presented an amusing playlet about the Class Celebrities.

The opus, in case you don't recall, was about a group of madcap Broadway producers who find that the only way they can get someone to back a show is to present Shakespeare. So, with "minor" changes in the original dramas, the three aforementioned tragedies are presented. The result is indeed hilarious, and the scenes range from a radio serial interpretation of Petruchio's love scene in "The Taming of the Shrew" to a swing version of the witches' dance in "Macbeth."

The entire show was once again under the able direction of "M.J." Belasco, who, in one short month, turned out an extravaganza which was immediately recognized as a "four star" success.

The backstage and technical ends of the production were capably handled by Squad K, under the direction of Mr. Martin Healy. This group, as well as the Radio Squad, did a great deal to make the show the success that it was. Credit, too, must be given to the many other individuals who did not come before the footlights, but who helped to make "All the World's A Stooze" a fitting climax to the activities of the Class of June '40.

SENIOR FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Two weeks before Chas. White, or just about the time Seniors were mobbing the Pro Office for tickets, another big event—rather, THE other big event—in the Seniors' life took place. It was the Senior Prom, which was held at the Hotel Astor on the evening of Friday, May 24.

Weeks before the 'red caps' had gathered hundreds strong for the Prom Rally—a revolutionary innovation similar to the Hat Convention—and had roared their approval of the plans suggested by the Committee Chairman. And when the cheering had been concluded the Hotel Astor was the place, $4.75 the price, and May 24th the date. The Rally evidently caused the Seniors to become extremely Prom-conscious, as is shown by the fact that the sale of ducats had to be halted long before the big event took place.

The Seniors, attired either formally or semi-formally, danced with their maidens fair to the delightful strains of Larry Rich's music. At one A.M., when the dinner dance was officially over and couples began leaving the Astor, headed in the general direction of the Manhattan night spots, it was the unanimous opinion that the affair had been the last word in Senior Proms and the most colossal pandemonium this side of Timbuktu.

Credit for the success of the shindig must be extended alike to Dan Silverman and Ben Zimmerman, Co-Chairmen of the Prom Committee, as well as to the many persons who aided and abetted them during the months of harrowing torture which preceded the affair. Orchids are likewise due Dean Cohen and Dean Foote, the former for his unending enthusiasm and ever-welcome display of sympathy, the latter for his continued interest in the affairs of the "fellows" and for the smiling patience with which he watched his beloved office being torn asunder each afternoon by the playful members of the Committee.

SKY BLAZERS

"Ooh, mama, look at the funny mans!"

It was—as you should have gathered—the debut of the Senior Hat.

With a rousing huzzah and a solemn amen, the sedate members of the Hat Committee threw out to the unsuspecting Senior body a batch of red chapeaux done up in black letters 'n' everything. An impatient glance burned in the eyes of the hapless —tims as they watched the sombreros being removed from their stately resting places in the packing cases.

The French Military Hat, pride of les généraux français, was discarded at a glance. The Alpine Hat was retired inconspicuously to the backround after its appearance had caused a frightful period of spasmodic yodeling. The Civil War Cap, symbol of militant virility, enjoyed a brief stanza of favor and popularity but was finally drowned out by a yeoman rendition of "Dixie." And so it came to be that the civic-minded Clinton Senior—willino or no—suddenly found himself the bewaddered possessor of a brilliant and stunning Policeman's Cap.

Weeks passed. In the meantime, those who had the courage to display their headgear beyond the shelter of Clinton's corridors were forced to endure the hardships of the heron. Brief sojourns in the subway were veritable nightmares. Walton Amazons, envious Sevens, and even innocent freshmen, loosed samples of their pity and indignation: "Hey, Red Cap, carry my bags!"; "Cossacks!"; "Chickie, the cops!"; "Could you tell me how to get to—?"; and many others we do not care to mention.

Within the school itself, the general effect was equally disastrous. Cellow freshmen glanced furtively from behind locked doors. The bronco charansins of rowdy sophomores refused to function properly. Sedate juniors trembled and hid their wondrous faces: blasé Sevens turned green with envy. And while all this degrading activity was in progress, the Clinton Senior walked nonchalantly through the halls, whistling a gay tune and stopping at intervals to reset his headgear at a more imperious angle.

And—"The Hats were a great success!" stoutly maintain Bob Stein and Al Guesin, Co-Chairmen of the Committee. "Just think, we sold almost one thousand. And think how happy we made the laughing world."

Think! Huh, we're too busy laughing ourselves!

CAMPUS CAPERS

Opening the 1939-40 court season as the Dark Horse of the Bronx-Upper Manhattan division, the Clinton quintet quickly proved itself to be the city's outstanding money team. Although they dropped three out of five non-league tilts, the basketballers won when it counted, that is, in P.S.A.L. encounters.

With the commencement of the league schedule, the Red and Black five really began to click. Magnificent floor play and an escapable ear mark of Coach Clifford Hurlbut's team throughout the season brought a 23-19 triumph over Evander. George Washington was next to take the court against the sure shooting, classy handling Clinton squad. The Presidents suffered a 33-29 setback.

By far the most thrilling encounter of the title race was Clinton's 46-44 overtime triumph registered against Monroe's powerful squad. Roosevelt's Rough Riders provided the opposition in the final game of the fall term. Playing his last game for Clinton, Captain Hermie Ladenheim led his undaunted quintet to a 36-32 victory over the team from Fordham Road.

Starting the second half of the P.S.A.L. campaign, the Mosholomen soundly whipped the Evander Legion once again. The final score read Clinton 44, Evander 26. A weak but game Trojan outfit from Washington put up a stubborn battle, but went home with a 37-25 licking, imposed by the hot Clinton outfit.

The Mosholomen entered the second Monroe game facing an opportunity to clinch the divisional crown. Holding true to form, in the final stanza, the Red and Black basketballers duplicated their eighteen point assault against Evander, posting a final score of 36-32 and claiming the Bronx-Upper Manhattan championship.

BASKETBALL

With the crown safely lodged upon Governor Clinton's brow, Roosevelt marred the hitherto unblemished record of the Red and Black by dealing the Clinton quintet its only P.S.A.L. setback, 26-24.

Then, in March, thousands of Clinton students shook the rafters of Madison Square Garden while their team took the floor against the label as Madison five in the semi-finals of the City Championship playoffs, and continued to shake them even after the dribblers had gone down to defeat 30-28 in the "sudden death" overtime period of one of the most exciting basketball contests anyone present could recall.

The squad consisted of: Herbie Ladenheim, Danny Kraus, Tommy Byrnes, Ed Brooks, Freddie Balkin, Bernie Phillips, Herbie Weissman, Danny Johnson, Bob Scheer, "Sonny" Moore, Gabby Gordon, James Watson, Paul Dreska, and Normie Schwartz.

TRACK

"On your mark—Set—Go!" And the Mostolu track forces broke away at a gallop in their bid for the City Championship by capturing their first encounter, the Stuyvesant High School Track and Field Meet.

Apparently, however, the ditch diggers burnt themselves out after this showing, for the next three meets found them going back on their enviable reputation. In the Manual Meet, the novice team finished in a three-way tie for third place, while the varsity could only garner the tenth spot. The National Indoor Championships saw the Clinton representatives finish a poor forty-second.

The last important race of the indoor season, the P.S.A.L. City Championships, fell due on Saturday, March 16. Under the leadership of the newly appointed captain, Emil Saporiti, our runners got nowhere in a hurry when they placed sixth in a field of twenty-seven top-flight teams.

The first airing of coach Scher's relay quartets was allowed by the New York Relays which were held at Randall's Island. After rain had cancelled the scheduled meet. Then the Governors forgot books, teachers and homework and went off to Philadelphia to compete in the Penn Relays.

The Boys High Meet's Novice Championship, Bronx Championship, and City Championships followed in December, with the Mosholus cindermen making a fine showing in all four meets.

The team was composed of: Captain Emil Saporiti, Cleveland Coleman, Frank Tedesco, Sy Levin, Bert Silberman, Fred Kahn, Charles Nickens, Herman Browsky, Donald Jacobs, Bernard Goldberg, Dennis Mateados, Charles Sanquedole, Roland Maione, John McKean, Henry DiNicola, Mel Gre and Stanton Callender, F. Crowley and O. Howell.

HANDBALL

With the coming of the spring term the P.S. XI Handball season was officially opened, and Clinton's wallmen took to the open air in an attempt to prove their mettle.

When the whistle blew announcing the official opening of league competition, Monroe and Morris, two of the three scheduled opponents, again went down to defeat at the relentless hands of the Mosholusmen. With the withdrawal of Seward Park from the league, only Evander remained as an obstacle in the championship fight. The Tiger showed up with one of the strongest squads in the city. Superb playing by Captain Nelson and Walter Reinthaler, playing first and second singles, respectively, led the Steamroller to victory and the Bronx Championship.

The remainder of the squad was made up of Roy Reubel, third singles; Morris Barsky and Herman Kirschenbaum, first doubles; Milton Kaplan and Stanley Pressman, second doubles, and Charles Antman, Lefty Aaron, and Milton Friedman, substitutes.

GOLF

With Captain Gerry Neitlich, Joseph Bennet, Melvin Geller, and Norman Mortimer Janak as mainstays, the DeWitt Clinton rollers entered the P.S.A.L. title race on April 27 with a good chance to capture the City crown. The team was minus the services of Don Verner, most consistent winner of last season's squad, who had deserted to Jamaica High School.

The Governors' divot diggers matched shots with Roosevelt, Bayside, Forest Hills, Richmond Hill, and Washington, and finally wound up their P.S.A.L. competition with Flushing.

FENCING

Rounding out a tough schedule, the Clinton fencersmen ended the season in good, if not brilliant, style. Falling before the thrusts and parries of the Clinton experts were the strong squads of Morris, Seward, and Everder, while Townsend Harris broke even with the Governors. Madison, Stuyvesant, Erasmus, and Textile displayed championship form in defeating the Red and Black. Outstanding during the season's play was the work of co-captains Tom Boyanan and Hal Goodman, and—Nitro!

TENNIS

It's the best balanced squad ever to have hit Clinton," remarked Mr. Morris Plager, Clinton's tennis mentor. And it may truly be said that this year's team, if not the tops, is certainly one of the finest aggregations ever to take the courts for the Governors.

In Jud Lober and Irv Dorfman, we find the backbone of this term's tennis outfit. Jud, winner of the Eastern Scholastic Invitation Tennis Tourney, is ranked as the number one netman in the Metropolitan area. He is classified as a hot/cold player. Dorfman, on the other hand, is the extreme opposite of the red-headed demon. He's a cool and calm player who can always be counted on to give the best of them a good fight.

Rounding out this well balanced outfit are Alfred Roser and Michael Polstein, who are ranked third and fourth, respectively. While Al is recognized as one of the finest base line shots in the school, Mike is an easy moving player who places his 'put-aways' well. Mr. Plager will certainly have to look far to find a squad comparable to this one.

CHEERLEADERS

SIGNING OFF

After four years, we have approached the end of our trail, the culmination of a definite period in our lives. In former months, we awaited it anxiously, expectantly; but now that it has become a reality we dread it, struggle feverishly to push it aside. Thus we are experiencing the feeling of the man who is forced to leave or discard something which has afforded him hours of profitable pleasure and who hesitates fearfully to do so. We are testing the emotions of the person who has walked for miles over a lush meadow and suddenly finds himself confronted by a bleak and Stygian desert.

And like these elusive and problematical people, we shall have much to accomplish and a host of difficulties to overcome before pleasure and security such as we realized in Clinton will once again be ours. We shall meet many obstacles ere the peace and joy for which all search become our tangible possessions. In the years of work and conflict which lie before us, let us hope that fate will not treat us too severely and that, in the end, it will set us down in some spot where we may labor happily and reap joy and safety always.
